

words and music
by Joel Justin

Dark Heart

Dark cloud roaming down the alley way my heart something to explore my life something to get turned around dark heart is knocking at your door

I cannot be the one to hang you from your chain this isn't paradise nothing here to gain if after holiness the reason you first came I only hope you know that some things will never change dark heart longing for an afterworld my life something to explain why live a life that's full of emptiness dark heart bundled up in pain

I will not be the one to let you through the gate this isn't lonely hearts I've turned another page you want for ambience the center of the stage
I only hope you know that some things will never change

I cannot be the one to hang you from your chain this isn't paradise there's nothing here to claim
you want for ambience the center of the stage
I only hope you know that some things will never change

dark cloud moving cross this paradise my heart something to explain my life something to get turned around dark heart may never be the same you cannot think this way that soon we will be dust we haven't earned this place or built a better trust you have a fantasy that's never out of range

I only hope you know that some things will never change

dark heart roaming down the alley way
dark heart
dark heart roaming down the alley way
dark heart
this could be paradise.